Iowa officially announced the departure of redshirt freshman wide receiver Cameron Wilson from the football program Saturday morning via release. The news of Wilson's transfer was first reported last week by Hawkeye Insider's Rob Howe.

According to the release sent out by Iowa, Wilson asked for and was granted a release from his scholarship in early July by head coach Kirk Ferentz and had since not been participating with the rest of the team in any summer workouts. It also said the roster listed in the team's media guide would be updated online following the Hawkeyes' first practice of fall camp, which is Monday. Iowa conducts its annual Media Day on Aug. 8 in Iowa City.

Wilson redshirted in 2012 and looked as though he could be in the mix at receiver during spring practices. He was never listed on the 2-deep during spring practices and wasn't listed on the 2-deep put out by Iowa last week.
